Terme di Casciana: Our heritage

Terme di Casciana, known as Aqui or Balneum ad Aguas from the start of the 19th century, then as Antica Aqui until after the world wars and Bagni di Casciana until it acquired its current denomination, is a spa with a tradition of wellness lasting literally thousands of years and millions of visitors who have obtained the benefits it offers.

The baths themselves are situated in a park-like setting only a few kilometres from the most beautiful cities in Tuscany. Up on a hill, surrounded by a charming village where the waters emerge, the baths are only a short distance from Pisa, Volterra, Siena, San Gimignano, Lucca, Firenze [Florence] and Livorno [Leghorn], allowing guests to combine wellness and culture, rest and tourism.

The legend that describes the discovery of the miraculous healing powers of the waters is a fascinating and sweet tale that dates back to the time of Matilda of Tuscany. The noblewoman had an old and ailing blackbird, which, she noticed, flew away every day and every day when it returned was more sprightly after diving into a pool of hot water. Having understood the motive of her faithful pet's rejuvenation, the Countess began to bathe herself in the same pool thereby reducing the aches and pains that troubled her due to her age and the gout she suffered from.

Whether or not one gives credit to this fascinating legend, history indicates that it was indeed the Countess Matilda who sponsored development of the spa about the year 1100 by constructing the buildings and infrastructures, landscaping and promoting the activities related to spa treatments.

Terme di Casciana maintained a rather precarious equilibrium until about the year 1300 when Federico da Montefeltro, lord of Pisa, ordered restructuring of the baths. These works gave the baths a more rational layout that was maintained until about the year 1700. The bathing area was divided into four distinct areas for men, women, the sick and animals. After an earthquake in 1846, Ferdinand III of the Habsburg-Lorraine line renewed the entire establishment, adapting it to the requirements of the times and the aristocratic Tuscan families who chose it as their preferred destination for taking the waters and socialising while resting.

In the years that followed and until approx. 1945, the spa was known as a well-equipped and gracious resort over a long period of splendour and fame throughout all of Italy.

The current overall structure of the spa was inaugurated in 1963, while new treatment facilities were introduced in the early 1990s including post-traumatic physical rehabilitation and aesthetics, which required additional restructuring and expansion. In 1999, the new aesthetics department and the external bathing pool with a surface area of 500 m² were inaugurated.

Today, Terme di Casciana is an ideal location for a vacation dedicated to health and relax, offering an extensive variety of specialised treatments for circulatory, rheumatic, respiratory and dermatologic pathologies. Medical and qualified personnel are available to provide guests with the finest services and cutting-edge technology ranging from mud baths to hydromassage baths, mineral water therapies, inhalations and therapeutic massages. ■

Acqua Mathelda

The hot spring waters of Casciana are known as Acqua Mathelda and flow uninterruptedly from a spring situated at a depth of 700 metres at the natural temperature of 35.7°C [96.3°F]. It is classified in the bicarbonate, sulphate, calcium alkaline earth metals family, with a mixture of natural mineral salts that distinguish it for peculiarity and therapeutic force.

The composition is particularly endowed with salts and carbon dioxide, which stimulates dilation of blood vessels, provoking a higher venous rhythm and general improvement of circulation. If used for inhalations, the water improves respiratory activity and is particularly effective in treatment of pathologies of the oropharyngeal cavity (sinusitis, rhinosinusitis, pharyngitis, laryngitis and tracheitis). It is particularly recommended for children as an adjuvant for raising immune response. The cycle of the water uses is completed by oral ingestion: drinking a glass stimulates activity of the gastrointestinal organs, combats hepatic intoxication and improves the digestive functions.

Thermal Spring Water Treatments (Italian Health Service Conventions)

Mud and therapeutic bathing

Mud is used to treat and prevent pathologies such as osteoarthritis and other degenerative forms, non-articular rheumatism and dermatological pathologies such as psoriasis. The mud is heated to a temperature of approx. 45-48°C [113-118°F] and applied to the joints requiring treatment, according to the instructions of the spa physician. The mud session lasts 20 minutes and is completed by bathing in the thermal spring water pool for 10 minutes.

Treatment cycle for peripheral vascular disease (hydromassage or ozonized baths)

Indicated for treating the after-effects of chronic phlebitis, chronic venous insufficiency (CVI), post-thrombotic syndrome (PTS), varices, capillaropathy and venous insufficiency with peripheral oedema. The treatment consists of immersion in the pool at the temperature of 35.7°C [96.3°F] for approx. 20 minutes. This causes peripheral vasodilation thus favouring venous return. This is associated with an underwater massage by expert operators.

Inhalation treatments and aerosol therapy

Inhalation therapy is applied and is scientifically recognized in the treatment and prevention of various chronic diseases of the upper and lower tracts such as laryngopharyngitis, chronic sinusitis, vasomotor rhinitis (VMR) and chronic bronchial rhinosinusitis syndromes. They are particularly indicated in childhood where they boost immune system defence. Inhalation therapy is executed with the aid of special devices that mix the thermal spring water with air to obtain a vapour carrying the active principles of the water to the mucosa of the upper and lower respiratory tracts. The complete cycle consists of 24 inhalation sessions of 10 minutes each, conducted at intervals of 10 minutes between them.

Therapeutic cycle for sensorineural hearing loss (SNHL) (tubo-tympanic insufflation)

The therapeutic cycle for sensorineural hearing loss is applied for treatment of chronic suppurative catarrhal otitis and tubal stenosis. The treatment cycle consists of tubo-tympanic insufflation and/or the Politzer technique accompanied by inhalation therapy. The purpose of the insufflations or the Politzer technique is to bring nebulized sulphureous water through the Eustachian tube into the ear drum at controlled pressure.

Hydropinotherapy

Hydropinotherapy is recommended in the case of the following disturbances: gastrointestinal or biliary dyspepsia and irritable bowel syndrome (IBS) of the type with constipation. Hydropinotherapy consists of drinking thermal spring water, generally in the morning before having breakfast. The quantity and type of water are specified by the spa physician during the visit, depending on the disturbance to be treated and the tolerance of the individual. ■
